LANGUAGE SCIENCES

http://www.elsevier.com/locate/langsci/

Volume 36 March 2013

CONTENTS

Current Trends in Grammaticalization Research

M. Norde, K. Beijering, A. Lenz	1	Current trends in grammaticalization research
J. Visconti	7	Facets of subjectification
H.-O. Enger	18	Morphological theory and grammaticalisation: the role of meaning and local generalisations
G. Trousdale, M. Norde	32	Degrammaticalization and constructionalization: two case studies
Ø.A. Vangsnes	47	Syncretism and functional expansion in Germanic wh-expressions
F. Van de Velde, J. van der Horst	66	Homoplasy in diachronic grammar
K. Kabata	78	Goal–source asymmetry and crosslinguistic grammaticalization patterns: a cognitive-typological approach
R. van Pareren	90	Body part terms as a semantic basis for grammaticalization: a Mordvin case study into spatial reference and beyond
E. Coussé	103	The grammaticalization of the have perfect in Dutch – a corpus study of contextual extension and semantic generalization
G. Rawoens	113	The Swedish verb låta 'let' from a synchronic and diachronic perspective
J. Nuyts	124	De-auxiliarization without de-modalization in the Dutch core modals: a case of collective degrammaticalization?
H. Perridon	134	The emergence of the s-genitive in Danish
B. De Clerck, T. Colleman	147	From noun to intensifier: massa and massa's in Flemish varieties of Dutch

ELSEVIER

ISSN 0388-0001
36, 1–160 (2013)